

Vermont Watercolor Artist Mary Ann Duffy Godin

A Vermont native who grew up on a Milton, Vermont dairy farm in a big Irish family where all things were homemade, homespun and homebound. This watercolor artist has a creative spirit that has followed her throughout her life. After a successful career as a 40-year public high school business/technology teacher, she transitioned into a watercolor artist and is also currently serving as a Justice of Peace in the town of Milton.

“I have responded to the world around me painting ordinary things we look at every day but sometimes do not see. I have shown the viewers what I have seen and loved and maybe they will see what I see and love it too.” I deeply believe that the gifts we are given we are given to share. I have participated in many juried events which include the Bryan Memorial, the Vermont Handcrafters, and the Vermont Watercolor Society where I have been awarded signature status among several others. I am all about improving my art from yesterday to today to the next based on feedback in real time. I have decided that even though I will continue to support art and artists, feedback from juried shows and organizations as it relates to my art is the area in which I want to concentrate.

Mary Ann is a member of the Vermont HandCrafters Inc., the Vermont Watercolor Society, and the Milton Artists’ Guild in Milton, Vt. Her work can be seen at:
